Questions For The S. Of S.

FOR the second time within a month questions have been raised in the House of Commons regarding air facilities in Hongkong—and on both occasions there has been a distinct clusiveness (and aloofness) in the official replies. _ On February 12 Mr Creech Jones pleaded that the decision on constructing an airfield in Hongkong "involves difficult and technical bonsiderations." He repeated this on Thursday when further pressed for a detailed reply, but, apparently designed as an encouraging rider, added that a technical survey party from the Ministry of Civil Aviation was on its way to the colony to make a full examination. Pingshan was abandoned as Hengkong's future airport in March, 1946 (which prompts a query; who is going to foot the bill for that shocking error of technical Judgment?); in July, the acting Colonial Secretary told the Lagialative Council that a "possible alternative site has been found within the boundaries of the colony." At the same time he confided that construction costs of a modern airfield would be between three and four million pounds, and that it would take anything up to 30 months to complete. He added that it was impossible, then, to say when construction could begin because the Secretary of State for the Colonies was considering the apportionment of costs between the Imperial Government and the Hongkong Government.

The last quotation provides the sting in the tall of the otherwise innocuous and gentest answers by Mr Creech Jones. But there are other questions about an airport which Hongkong would like to put to the Secretary of State. (1) Does the Imperial Government agree that unless Hongkong has adequate air facilities it may well lose its importance as a vital link between the Pacific and the rest of the world? (2) is not the establishment of a modern airfield in this colony of more importance than its cost? Is not the hesitancy over constructing a modern gerodrome less to do with finance than with general Colonial Office policy? It may be felt that we are displaying effrontery in postulating such questions. Yet we feel they are pertinent in the light of Mr Creach Jones's House of Commons observations and the following statements made in Legislative Council eight months ago: "Government is aware of and endorses the view that it is of the first importance that the Colony should he provided as soon as possible with the most up-to-date and efficient air transport facilities....If Hongkong is to be a main link in the network of international airways a modern land acrodrome must be established without delay." Does that mean another five years from now-or

That word 'but'

The moment you offer a man or woman in chains something gladsome and Joyous to do, he or she can only reply: "I would love to join you, but." And this "but" means "I cannot afford it," or "I am already engaged," or "It would upset the plans of my house," or "I have a dog and could not leave it," or one of a hundred other reasons. It is very hard for a person to be both rich and in prison. I therefore took my choice, and decided to be rich enough to starve in freedom, rather than to feast in thraldom.

Practically, what does being rich mean? The answer is quite simple. It means that a rich mon produces more than he needs.

If I take a piece of land and dig and produce more potatoes or wheat or apples than I need I am at once thus for a copitalist and very rich.

The same thing applies to the whole of life. Produce more than you need and you are rich! Need more than you produce and you are poor! It is the need of things which you cannot get which creates misery and poverty.

One of the commonest mistakes in life is, I again repent, the idea that money represents wealth, Money represents only the accumulation of the results of somebody's work, Since every man and woman in health and with ordinary talent has the privilege of work, then all have the privilege of being rich, because they may work as long as they like, and they may make their work as valuable as they choose.

I would impress upon everyone who wants to be happily rich the DEMEMBER, that after a few months only since the end of World War II, a plot has been discovered in Germany which, according to all reports, is associated with the development of germ warfare. In 1934, Professor Banz published a book, "Germany Prepare for War," There are about 5,000 racchorses in which a chapter was devoted to germ warfare. Although it was apparently not developed in time for the war just over, make no mistake about it, both Germany and Japan will endeavour by underground methods to discover some means to secure revenge. IS A HORSE?

THAIRS week I have read nearly half a million words about the horse, something I would never have dreamed of undertaking had I not been stuck indoors all the time with a cold.

The half-million words are all in one volume called "The Book of the Horse" and after the first few hundred thousand of them I felt so up in the subject nobbling is. Although there will be a general anti-climax feeling about local football for some while following the thrilling battles between 45 Commando and Sing Tao, this week-end's fixture list is not without interest. The pick is undoubtedly to-morr ow's meeting of South China and 42 Commando. This is an interesting match and promises to draw a large crowd.

It is very odd that the Senior Shield semi-finals should have produced such vastly different types of football. First, in the second tilt of the day Rees, although not in on the championship, are certain to go all out to down the conquering Giants. The "second best" St Joseph's will have to be alset if they intend to put their runners-up position on ice against the speedy Rovers next Sunday. Also, Recs meeting Canadian Chinese on the same day is expected to produce some close play, observing that the latter elbowed themselves in to victory in the marathon affair when they last met in the first round. The opener in this week's two games is that between Baseball Club and Canadian Chinese. If they turn up there will be a game-which is South China need not be taken into not going to be much of a battleaccount in forecasting the result of the Talpan-ish Buseballers will have done their duty and enjoyed themselves before going down to the Canadian boys.

FOR YOU

The ingenuity of the dress industry in Britain has overcome the continued shortage of textiles in n way which may make fashion history. For instance, in a recent collection the designer showed suits complete with two-colour walstcoats, the front of wich was in the suit material, the back in a vivid contrasting colour.

Then there were other outfits which consisted of a skirt in fine suiting and top cut so closely to the figure that it looked like a matching bodice until the mannequin removed it and proved that it was actually a fitting jacket. Beneath this was worn a contrasting blouse in woollen jersey, and over it a long

In this way are the designers trying to help women who must make n sult live a double or even triple life. The idea has gained ground, and a neat little afternoon dress has a waist-length jacket which, when discarded, reveals that the top of the dress is cut low enough to transform it into a gown suitable for theatre or restaurant wear. If a slight trimming of gleaming sequins is added to the decolletage of this dress, it is all to the good, for it suggests a touch at glamour as nothing else

NO BAR AGAINST WHITE RUSSIANS

The Australian Legation in Shanghai has issued a statement denying a charge made in Brisbane that it was discriminating against White Russians in favour of refugee Jews in granting permits in China to enter Australia.

The charge was attributed to Andrew Clark, director of the Russian and European Christian Mission in Brisbane. The Legation quoted him as saying that White Russians in China were getting no answer to their applications and "it seems that only Jews can enter Australia." The Legation said that Australia refuses to receive any persons who Batavia, Feb. 28. Captain Gray, of the American freighter Martin Behrmann, told the commander of the Netherlands destroyer Kortenger lying alongside that the warship would have to tow his vessel to port for search because he would refuse to drive her there under her own power. An official Republican source told the United Press that Gray flatly re-fused to move the Behrmann to Tandgjong Priok for search as requested. He said his orders from New York were to proceed to Colombo and Suez and not to go to a Dutch-held harbour.

The Behrmann at present has a 30-man guard from the Kortenaer abourd, and Captain Gray's crew apparently is on a sit-down strike.

CHURCHILL SLASHES SOCIALISTS

London, Feb. 28. Mr Winston Churchill to-day called upon the Conservatives to take "all steps within our power" to bring Britain's Labour Government to a speedy end.

In a message to the Political Council of the Constitutional Club, Mr Churchill said, "The economic and financial structure of our country is now endangered through the vicksis legislation and maladministration of the Socialist Government. The Empire is being cast away.

"I believe it an urgent matter of public duty for everyone of us to take all steps within our power to bring this government to a speedy fifty cents. What is the government end. I urge my fellow members of the Constitutional Club to set an outstanding example of political zeal and enthusiasm."

Mr Churchill is President of the Constitutional Club, a Conservative Party organisation.-United Press.
